In conjunction with the European Academy of Andrology (EAA), and with the Healthy Male (formerly, Andrology Australia) organisation, the International Society of Andrology (ISA) is seeking expressions of interest to translate educational and consumer materials from English into the languages of our member societies. These educational materials have been developed by EAA and Andrology Australia and are currently being hosted on their websites: <https://www.andrologyawareness.eu/knowledge-base/> <https://www.healthymale.org.au/mens-health>.

We encourage all our member societies to review these online resources because the materials are simply outstanding, and of immense benefit to the public. We wish to make these more widely available throughout the world because our patients do not all speak or read English. We hope that our member societies will also see this as an opportunity to better serve our communities.

In addition, the World Health Organisation (WHO) has recently published the 6th edition of its semen analysis manual in English and is available on their webpage: <https://www.who.int/publications/i/item/9789240030787>

At present, this invaluable resource is only available in English. Many of our member societies have assisted the WHO in translating this important resource in the past, and we are now also seeking expressions of interest from member societies or institutions recommended by member societies to assist in translation.

Please address all expressions of interest to me by return email:

Finally, the Italian Society of Andrology and Sexual Medicine (SIAMS) is holding its 14th Congress on October 21-23, 2021 in Bologna, Italy, as a hybrid event. The Congress will be introduced by a full day International Symposium organized by SIAMS, the International Society of Andrology and the European Academy of Andrology. The event will be streamed live for free, but registration is required. For further details please visit: <https://www.andrology.org/event/isa-eea-siams-joint-symposium-october-21-2021/>

Yours faithfully,

Giovanni Corona
